Well it's good that you've found a reason to want to know about Canada visa application in Nigeria, especially visitor visa and how to apply for it because I had a hunch to write about it and save you the hassle of long hours boring internet research. The Canadian visitor visa serves similar purposes to British visitor visas. Also called temporary Resident Visa (TRV), it is a conditional permit granted by the Canadian government to visit Canada for recreation or business or travel as a parent or grandfather of a permanent Canadian resident (these services are provided under the Super TRV visa). To visit Canada for other purposes not served by a Canadian visitor visa or TRV, one must apply for any of the four other Canadian visas: Study Permits, Work Permits, or Permanent Travel Document. Articles on these types of visas will be released soon, so be ware. But now, let's look at the steps for applying for a Canadian visitor visa. In general, there are two ways of applying: online base application and paper application. Now let me explain the application process for each method. Hotel reservation: In case you don't have anyone to invite you, you will need a valid hotel reservation as proof of the accommodation agreement. Your hotel reservation must be valid and must be verifiable if the embassy calls the hotel. Many hotels will cancel your reservation as soon as the payment is not received within 24 hours after booking, this could lead to a visa refusal. We also wouldn't encourage you to spend a lot of money to book a hotel when you haven't received your visa. We have a solution for booking the hotel that you should see to not fall victim. Read the hotel reservation + flight reservation for the visa application after booking a flight: Read the hotel reservation + flight reservation for the visa application position Note: Your forms (including barcode sheets) can only be printed on white, bonded, non-glossy paper using a laser printer.
