Jeans color guide

If you're looking for a way to add more colors to your wardrobe, colorful jeans are a great way to do it. Jeans are versatile, can be mixed and matched with different looks and dressed up or down. And now that you can buy them in almost any color, the possibilities are almost endless. You know that a trend has reached cosmic status when celebrities start to embrace it. And when Kate Middleton, Duchess of Cambridge, showed up for an impromptu hockey match in coral-coloured jeans, sales skyrocketed. Having a lifetime of regular blue jeans washed down, although the thought of colorful jeans can be daunting. Don't be scared. You're not going to look like a glow stick or a candy cane. You just need to know what's trending and what you're not. Not all colored jeans are skinny jeans or jeggings. You can find them in a variety of pieces and styles. Find out what works for you. Wear a neutral color on top, especially if the color of the jeans is particularly bright. Colorblock is a free glossy top if you feel brave and super-trendy. Wear a print top, but it's low key, so blend in with jeans and don't fight them. Go ahead and wear colorful jeans in winter, but look for more muted colors instead of the bright and flashy colors you'll wear in the spring or summer. Try pastel colored jeans as well. They are an emerging trend and add a sweet softness to their look. Wear black, brown or nude colored shoes in colorful jeans. You can go to apartments, boots, or heels - it all depends on how much you want to dress up in the dress. No. Wear outrageous prints in brightly colored jeans. Both looks will compete for attention. Try to wear pastel if a light colour wash does not flatter the body type. Wear flashy accessories. Look for neutral extras and let the colorful jeans make a fashion statement for you. Dress from one color to the toe. If you need at least to make the top and bottom different shades or tones, so it does not look like a big stain of color. Wear jeans that are not flattering for your physique. The same rules apply to colored jeans as traditional jeans. Wash colorful jeans in hot water. In fact, turn them out before washing in cold water to preserve the color. Some popular colors are denim coral, different shades of blues, mustard, orange, purple and green. See if any of these work for you! Sometimes all you need is to pair your new jeans with a plain white t-shirt. Once a little novelty item, white jeans have become a staple in many women's wardrobes. Unlike regular, old, garden-type blue jeans, white jeans look a little dressed up. You feel a little more prepared for what the sun has to offer. But since they're farmers, they're still casual. But even the most athent fans of white jeans often only wear spring and summer. Maybe I still subscribe to that old no white job theory that our parents are parents grandparents preached. Maybe this seems more natural to them. Or maybe they're just thinking about skimping sandals and the colors of warm weather when they're thinking about what to pair with their white jeans. I totally get it. That's what I thought. But, we all have to try to remember that there is a wide variety of shoe colors that look good in white jeans - and they can be just as good in autumn and winter. You're still not convinced? Check out some of the examples below. Donato Sardella/Getty Images for Vogue/Getty Images White on White is so chic it's nearly resistible - especially in summer. And even though there's no rule that says you have to wear white shoes with all-white clothes, there's no law against it. For this combination, the possibilities are endless enough. You can add a white top or jacket, as well as colorful or neutral accessories, or add color to the blend through your shirt or jacket. But whatever you decide on the front page, don't stress too much. It is almost impossible to spoil the combination of white jeans and white shoes. But I have a word of caution. If you go for a stylish casual look (think heels and jeans), there is an essential element to keep this look clean and crisp: the shoes should have a tip-top shape. Jamie McCarthy/Getty Images One of my favorite colors to pair with white jeans is gray. Gray booties, boots, pumps, sandals or apartments. It doesn't matter, because gray and white are really a multi-seasonal palette. Although this dynamic combination works especially well in spring and autumn and is nicely transformed into summer and winter - especially if dark greys or blacks are added to the mix. Stephen Lovekin/Getty Images Wearing black shoes and white jeans is another look that's easy to pull off. But, again, many women don't think about it because they tend to wear white jeans more in summer than they do in the cooler months. Consequently, they tend to achieve a lighter neutral shade of shoes. But as I said, not only are white jeans an acceptable year round, the combination of white jeans/black shoes can also be worn at any time of the year. Dresses only black and white, or black, white and gray are two of the simplest looks that work, but do not feel please obliged to stick to such a safe color scheme. Since black shoes and white jeans are both neutral, they will technically work well and will not only be about any color (see also the color below) - but you can really shine something as dynamic as bright red or royal blue. Dave M. Benett/Getty Images So, we've covered the big three neutrals: white, gray, and black. But what about those neutral shoes like sand, taupe, tan, beige, naked, bedding, ivory and cream? Easy. They all look good in white jeans. Lightweight neutral shoes are probably the easiest option for bright white jeans. That's why it's such a popular combination. But even mid-tone neutrals, and fall earth tones like brown, can be beautifully Jeans, as long as the rest of your dress works together. Another thing that is really beautiful about wearing these colors, white jeans, is that the style of the shoes is less important than it would be, say, black footwear - which can be overwhelming if you don't take care of the rest of the outfit. You can choose strappy sandals, full coverage flats, pumps, or booties. It doesn't really matter, because the contrast will be much softer than the darker colors. Venturelli/WireImage/Getty Images Well, yes. But then again, not quite. Of course, you can wear them in whatever color shoes you want, but you're definitely going to make things easier for yourself - and get a natural combination - if you stick with colors that are very bright and true. They can be pastels or bright. Even some dark colors work very well. But, if the color of the shoes can be described as dull, dark, or dusty, you may want to save them in jeans, which are on the cream or ivory side, rather than wearing them in a pair that is sharp, bright white. Jason Kempin/FilmMagic/Getty Images Metallic shoes and sandals look stunning in white jeans, but again, the cleaner or cleaner the color (and finish), the better the combination will look. Silver is probably the most popular of the two options, but beautiful, bright or even lighter sparking gold is a wonderful choice as well. And yellow gold provides a nice little contrast. On the other hand, antiqued or weathered with a pair of white jeans will probably look a little too dull or old, the brightness and novelty of pure white jeans. The same can be said for tin and bronze footwear.
